THE Louisville Times, whose editor is reported, REPORTED mind you, while holding free silver views, is from circumstances over which he has no control, forced to keep them in abeyance and shout for the gold standard, is moved io say: "The Stanford INTERIOR JOURNAL, a newspaper which swallowed its sound money convictions and is still able to "hold 'em down," rises to remark anent Senatorial affairs at Frankfort that "the bolting republicans agreed to support Senator Martin and the gold democrats were a unit for him, but the Blackburn rule or ruin men would not hear to it, and upon them must fall the blame of a failure to elect a democrat. * Coming from such a source, this is not only rank heresy, but downright bigamy.

When the INTERIOR JOURNAL made this alleged heretical and "bigamistifact, since called attention thereto by the Owensboro Messenger, that there are two populists in the Legislature, who are voting for Mr. Blackburn, whose votes he could not control for a ably is true that those who are at the seat of war know better how to wage it than we who are so far in the rear. This statement is due to Mr. Blackburn, to whom Kentucky owes a debt that she can hardly repay, for preventing the election of such a creature as Hunter to the U.S. Senate.

With reference to "swallowing our convictions," hold your auricular close Brer. Logan, while we tell you once for all that we try to do our fighting within the folds of the party, not against it. We did insist that the party reaffirm its former position on the are for sound money, but we do not accord to ourselves more knowledge than the country into bankruptcy and ruin vored few, as the party which the Times helped to elect is now doing. To use its own favorite expression, the people asked for bread and it gave them a stone, for an improvement in the currency and it gave them higher taxes. To us anything that is democratic is better than republicanism, and while we may not shout very vociferously for "free silver at 16 to 1 or bust," the INTERIOR JOURNAL is going to stay with the democratic party till the cows come home the last day in the evening, believing that in its success lies the only hope of the nation for honest, economical government.

AFTER many trials and great tribulations, the Louisville Dispatch was launched upon the tempestuous sea of journalism Sunday. It is rather a crude looking craft, evidently manned by an incongruous crew, but allowances have to be made for first appearances and those whose hopes had been raised so high and who are giving vent to disappointment, should remember that we all have to crawl before we can walk. If the object of the paper is fully. WITH his 96-column issue of the Elkton Progress, Editor Loving W. Gaines seems to take both the cake and the bakery from the rural roosters. His is. sue of Friday was a stunner.

As predicted, both accused and accusers were indicted by the grand jury at Frankfort for conspiracy to bribe, a true bill having been found against Dr. Hunter, John Henry Wilson, E. T. Franks, Capt. Noel Gaines and T. R. Tanner. They were arrested and granted bail in $250 each. An indictment against Hunter for perjury also is pending. Though the majority sticks to him and would do so if he were convicted of rape or horse stealing, many of Hunter's followers are disgusted with their idol and are ready to throw him overboard without further ceremony, but the others agree with him that he can not afford to quit now, nor can the party afford to kick him out with such infamous charges hanging over him. He must, however, demand an immediate trial, if he is confident of his own innocence or stand convicted in public opinion, if he does not. At any rate even half way decent republicans ought not to support him further until he acquits himself of the grave offense, the penalty for which is both fine and imprisonment. It wont do to charge that Dr. Hunter is a victim of conspiracy. The court is open for his vindication and nothing short of a searching judicial investigation to show his innocence will be accepted. The balloting Friday left cal" suggestion, it had overlooked the him still two votes short of the nomination. #### RAISING GRAPEVINES.

The Layering Process Is Recommended to Novices-Propagation by Cuttings.

Some varieties of grapes are readily raised from cuttings, but the easiest and most certain way for novices is by lay-

PROPAGATION BY LAYERS.

With a view to assisting amateurs Country Gentleman represents this process by an illustration here reproduced.

A branch of the preceding year's growth is bent down as represented at Fig. 1 and covered with soil three inches deep, or a strong shoot of the present season's early growth is used in the same way. Roots are thrown out as represented, and before winter it is detached and taken up, forming the two plants in Fig. 2. This is the simplest and easiest way to increase the plants on a small scale.

Cuttings for outdoor work are made seven or eight inches long, each with two or more buds (Fig. 3). They are placed in a sloping position in the soil, which is compactly press. ed, the upper bud pose of originating new varieties.

The Japanese Rosa Wichuraiana, which was introduced a few years ago, has proved very valuable where a trailing carpeting plant is needed. The plant forms long shoots, creeping along the ground. It makes a handsome carpet under tall growing roses and is used in parks to cover slopes or hang over embankments. Although it suffered in some places around Boston last winter, it is generally regarded as entirely hardy. It is sometimes called memorial rose, being much used in cemeteries.

In this connection Rural New Yorker describes a set of hybrids resulting from the Wichuraiana crossed with Hybrid Remontant, Brier and Noisette. This set includes four varieties-Manda's Triumph, pure white, double flowers, very fragrant: Universal Favorite, double, bright rose; South Orange Perfection, double, blush pink shading to white, and Pink Roamer, single, bright pink, lighter at the center, with deep orange stamens. This is said to be a sweetbrier hybrid, and should therefore prove very hardy and vigorous. In addition to their value as trailing plants the Wichuraiana roses may be trained to form a beautiful arch.

Hardy Cactuses.

Meehan's Monthly calls attention to the fact that few plants are more effective than hardy cactuses for many situations in flower gardening. The one most frequently seen is Opuntia rafinesquii, a smooth jointed form, which has brilliant yellow flowers in midsummer. Until late years it was confounded with Opuntia vulgaris, which is a more slender grower, but very hard to distinguish from the former one. There are varieties referred to O. rafinesquii, that are more distinct than this. The common form of opuntia from the plains, O. missouriensis, also with yellow flowers, but having the joints covered with slender silky hair, makes a very pretty directions on brim and crown. #### WOMAN AND FASHION.

The Afternoon Tea Gown-Staginess Is Bad Form - Hat Trimmings - A Very Useful Organization.

Afternoon tea is not properly a function. If there be reason for serving it one day, there is reason every day, and it is always a well thought of contribution to any woman's day at home. The visiting gown is therefore the proper thing for tea, whether it be formal or informal. The foregoing opinion is expressed in The Puritan, where the matter is further elucidated by the illustration of a well dressed woman going to an afternoon tea and the following remarks:

There are any number of people who do not know the limits of an elegant visiting gown to be worn through the city streets whether they go in a carriage or on foot. Many women get their

A Useful Organization.

In England there is a society the object of which is to provide untrained women with work they are capable of performing. This is mending, patching and darning. Packages of household linen and stockings and other frayable articles are called for on receipt of a postal card, mended and returned.

Odd Mention. There is a preponderance of enameled

Roman pearls are much worn in place of real pearls, and when judiciously selected and properly mounted cannot be told from the genuine article by any but experts.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Productive Forces of Cuba-Her Rich Soil, Her Valuable Forests and Her Great Mineral Wealth.

[Special Correspondence.] With an area about equal to that of the state of Pennsylvania, a length of 775 miles and a width varying from her productive soil, mineral wealth and climatic conditions, should entitle her to rank among the foremost communities of the world, a distinction to which I believe she will soon attain whenever a stable government and cheerful obedience to the powers that be present to the home seeker and investor conditions that will make home pleasant and capital secure. Although founded and settled more than 50 years before the United States, Cuba has still 13,000,000 acres of primeval forests where the woodman's ax has never been heard. These forests are timbered, besides other woods, with mahogany, cedar, logwood, redwood, ebony, lignum vitæ and caiguaran, the latter being more durable in the ground than iron or steel.

In a report to the state department Consul Pulaski F. Hyatt says that the soil is a marvel of richness, and fertilizers of any kind are seldom used unless in the case of tobacco, even though the same crops be grown on the same field for 100 years, as has already happened in some of the old sugar cane fields. If all the land suitable to the growth of sugar cane were devoted to that industry, it is estimated Cuba might supply the entire western hemisphere with sugar. The island has already produced in a single year for export 11,000,000 tons, while its capabilities have only been in the experimental stage. The adaptability of the soil for tobacco culture has long been the envy of the world, until a cigar that has not some a hearing. Cuba takes great pride in the quality of her coffee, and until the rebellion of 1868 she raised a large quantity for expretension of having at least a little Cuban tobacco stands condemned without

No Frosts to Destroy.

Tropical fruits, such as oranges, lemons, pineapples, mangoes, guavas, tamarinds and many fruits with a local value, but too short lived for export, are here entirely at home and never catch the unlooked for frosts so frequent in Florida. The cereal crops never have and probably never will have a profitable cultivation on the island. Corn is raised on a small scale, while wheat and oats are never grown at all. No flour mill exists on the island. The lover of fresh vegetables, I think, is doomed to disappointment on coming blue grass. Redtop is another stand by, to Cuba. Garden truck is always in sea- but is better suited to meadows than on, but that crisp freshness which we so much relish in our northern vegetables seems to be wanting.

In mineral wealth Cuba is capable of taking high rank. Gold and silver have not been found in paying quantities. Copper was mined at Cobre by the natives before Columbus discovered the island, and there is strong proof that native copper was carried across to Florida and used by the Florida Indians hundreds of years ago. The mound builders of that state buried with their dead copper ornaments and utensils hammered from native copper.

As no copper ore is found in Florida or in the United States for a long distance from there, and as that found in the United States or in Mexico does not correspond chemically with that buried with the mound builders, it occurred to Professor R. H. Sanders of the Academy of Natural Sciences in Philadelphia that it was possible that these mound builders had water communication with Cuba and got their copper from there.

A Very Interesting Discovery.

He therefore communicated with the writer and procured a sample of native Cuban copper, which proved upon analysis to be the identical kind used in the copper ornaments mentioned. In the early part of the present century some English capitalists purchased these mines, which are nine miles from Santiago. The books of the Santiago de Cuba consulate show that from 1828 to 1840 an average of from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 worth of copper ore was shipped annually to the United States.

These mines continued in successful operation until 1867, when a combination of circumstances and not the poverty of the mines closed them, and the various shafts, from 900 to 1,200 feet deep, filled with water, all save 300 feet being below the level of the sea. In later years considerable copper was taken from these mines by pumping the water from the shafts to tanks, into which iron scraps were thrown. The copper held in solution by the water deposited on the scrap iron, which in the same year. These are called second time was broken off and the iron used

The Iron Ore Output.

The iron mines of Cuba, all of which are located near Santiago, overshadow in importance all other industries on the eastern end of the island, constituting the only industry that has made any pretense of standing up against the shock of the present insurrection. The Juragua and Daiquiri iron companies (American), with a combined capital of over $5,000,000, now operate mines in this vicinity and employ from 800 to 1,400 men, shipping to the United States from 30,000 to 50,000 tons of iron ore per month, the largest portion of which is used at Bethlehem, Steelton, Sparrow's Point and Pittsburg. The ore of these mines is among the richest in cent of pure iron and is very free from sulphur and phosphorus.

In the Sierra Maestra range are found numerous deposits of manganese, an ore indispensable in the manufacture of steel. American capital opened a mine at Ponupo and built a railroad to it. After shipping one cargo the mines were stopped by the insurgents.

MEADOWS AND PASTURES.

Grasses of First Merit Introduced Inte the Great Prairie Country.

The common medium red clover is a favorite wherever it will grow. It will grow in all parts of the upper Mississippi valley and in nearly all the northern and central states. In the newer and cold sections of Dakota and Mon-30 to 160 miles, Cuba stands in a geo- taux it cannot be relied on, but will graphical position which, together with probably do better as the soil grows older. In the dry belt which runs down through the Dakotas, western Kansas and western Nebraska this great plant cannot be relied on. The Mammoth clover is adapted to about the same localities. Alsike clover in the west is best adapted to low lying slough lands. It is more hardy than the medium red clover and will therefore grow in colder latitudes. In sections of amole rainfall it will grow well on arable soils that are not loams. Thomas Shaw, excellent authority, has grown good crops of Alsike clover on the stiffest of clay soils in Ontario. In a communication to Prairie Farmer be furnishes valuable information, as follows: White clover is adapted to about the same range of climate as Alsike clover and is even more hardy. Crimson clover is a favorite in the Atlantic states and in those of the south. but in the northern states it is not likely to do us much good. The winters are too severe for it. And just here it may be mentioned that the soils best adapted to clover have usually a goodly sprinkling of clay or clay loam in them and rest on a clay subsoil not too distant from the surface. With reference to grasses, timothy is in a sense cosmopolitan. It will grow all over the northern and central states where cultivation can be successfully carried on unless it be in a narrow strip of dry belt. It does best in moist loam soils and succeeds most poorly in light sands, since in these it does not get enough food to sustain strong growth. Austrian brome grass, next to timothy, promises to become a favorite for meadow and for pasture. It will never supplant timothy where the latter is a pronounced success, but it can fight the battle of existence where timothy would languish-that is to say, on dry upland light soils and in regions of deficient rainfall. This grass is likely to prove a great boon to the farmers in the dry belt. It has the same habit of growth as quack or couch grass, but it can be easily destroyed when we want to get rid of it. Of the pasture grasses, of course blue grass is king. It is pushing its empire westward and will soon reign over all the northern half of this great republic from the Atlantic to the Pacific unless it be on the ranges where blue joint and buffalo grass grow side by side like brothers under conditions unfavorable as yet to the growth of stores. It is, of course, best adapted to slough lands. It is quite at home in nearly all the lowlands of the prairie. The foregoing includes grasses of first merit introduced into the prairie country. There are others, but their adaptability is more local. One of these is orchard grass, a second is tall oat grass, and a third is meadow fescue. Where these will grow profitably can only be positively determined by actual test. Alfalfa also has its place, and this also must be determined by actual test. In some sections of the prairie it is a veritable godsend; in other localities it cannot be depended on.

Value of Humus to the Soil. A certain amount of humus is essential to soil fertility. As Agriculturist Clinton of Cornell station explains: The value of humus lies not so much in its chemical influence as in its physical action. It is a great reservoir for the storage of nitrogen and moisture. It affects the temperature of the soil by making it warmer. It is able to absorb moisture from the atmosphere, and having once taken it up holds it.

stable manure, says the authority quoted, we are then not only adding plant spectfully, "Excuse me, madam, but food to the soil, but we are adding this valuable humus, which is able to retain doctor forbade your eating oysters."-181 per cent of its weight of moisture. Argonaut. Here is where farming with commercial fertilizers fails. Though we may give all the plant food necessary for the growth and development of the plant, the commercial fertilizer does not add humus to the soil. If its use is continued year after year without being supplemented by green or barn manures, the humus of the soil is finally used up, and the crop fails because there is no power in the soil to hold moisture.

Growing Second Crop Potatoes.

The second crop is grown from the potatoes of the second crop of the previous year, the same as used for the first crop, and not from potatoes grown early crop because they are often grown on land from which an early crop has been dug. In Kentucky where, probably, the best second crop potatoes are produced, this crop is planted in July and sometimes as late as early in August. When planted so late, they are frequently cut down by frost before mature, but these immature potatoes are said to be the best for seed, although quite small. The ground must be very fertile.-Rural New Yorker.

Wlat Lime Does.

Lime may perform any one of three offices in the soil. These, as presented in Farm and Fireside, are: First, it may serve as a needed plant food. All plants require some lime. It is the rule, however, that soils contain an abundance of the world, yielding from 62 to 67 per lime for this purpose, and the cases are probably rare in which an application of lime to serve as plant food is required. Second, it produces a mechanical effect upon soils. In the case of clays lime serves to render them more open and tractable. Third, it produces a chemical effect, acting as a solvent, releasing some of the plant food in the soil that has been resting there in an insoluble Castelmary and Alfonso the Dresser-Eurglar Story-Remarkable Presence of Mind-A Great Hit.

There is a humble dresser behind the atmosphere of grease pots and rouge. He brushes out the beards of fathers, he hangs up the crowns of kings, he takes off the boots of gods.

"Tieni, Alfonso," said Castelmary on the fateful Wednesday night before world, "keep this for me" And the old singer, who had no one to take care of him or his affairs, no one to save his theless absurd. Even in old England a money for or to give it to, handed Alfonso his pocketbook with $2,000 in it.

They brought him back to the dressing room, awful in his foolish clothes, with his motionless painted face. The police asked for the keys of his trunks and for his watch. Alfonso showed where they were kept. Then he took town of St. Botolph. the pocketbook that none but he knew of from his breast and said: "Ecco.

There is a great deal of money in it." There was $2,000, 10,000 francs. Only Alfonso and his brother exiles know what 10,000 francs means to a "dago" working for his living in America. Only Alfonso and his brother exiles know how much sunshine and seashine and warmth and blessed far niente in a little house at Marechaire 10,000 francs will buy. Alfonso gave up the money, unasked and unquestioned. Good luck to Alfonso. —Town Topics.

A Burglar Story.

This burglar story was related last week by a Fourth avenue young woman: Above all things she admires savoir faire and has frequently been heard to remark that to be awkward or embarrassed or to lose one's self possession was a crime and stamped the unhappy person as a plebeian of hopeless degradation. Because of these beliefs she is forced to admit that he must have been a gentleman in reduced circumstances.

She found him in her room after dinner when she came to get her carriage cloak. As she entered he stood before the dressing table thoughtfully and gracefully smoothing his hair with her vory brush.

He turned pleasantly at her little cry, and then his face expressed the most prefound mortification and amused embarrassment. "Really," he said, "I beg 1,000 pardons, madam. The most extraordinary thing! I am so very absentminded that I am continually mistaking my house. I live in the next block, in a duplicate of this building. I am invariably starting up the wrong steps, and tonight, I see, my wandering wits carried me still farther. My wife will call tomorrow to assure you of my regret for this wretched mistake."

Then he picked up his hat, and incidentally her purse and jewel box, and bowed himself out.

And she never said a word. She says now that it was fully worth the loss of her jewels. - Louisville Com-and so the 11 shells would be suffi-ht. It happened that, when the oysters were served at dinner, the hostess was engaged in a very animated conversation with one or two of her neighbors, and, forgetting her determination, took one of the shells of oysters and set it before herself. If the servant's heart fell in consternation at this, he gave When we plow under a green crop or no external sign of it, but, speaking in tones distinct, though low, said, reyou said I was to remind you that the

The Editor's Great Hit.

A ridiculous typographical error in an Arkansas paper has aroused indignation in a little town in that state. A wedding took place between two promithe editor took particular pains to give the young couple a good "send off." He wrote up the event in florid style and displayed it under a three line head and enjoyed the conscious feeling of duty well performed.

Imagine his horror, however, when he read the next morning in letters that seemed big enough for a circus poster, 'Charming Home Wedding. Pink and White Were the Prevailing Tights. Many Monkish Gowns Were Worn by the Fair Guests." With a howl of rage he seized a shotgun and started for the proofreader, but he had flown. The editor had written "tints" and "modish."-Pittsburg Dispatch.

Social Etiquette.

When you invite a friend to visit you, specify exactly the time you expect her to stay. Say, "We shall expect you on the 1st of May and will hope to have you remain with us until the 10th." This is not impolite, but the most perfect politeness, since it leaves your visitor in no doubt, says a writer in The Ladies' Home Journal, authority for the following:

The Game of Whist.

There was a time, and that was not very many years ago, when a great portion of the American people looked with disfavor upon any game played with cards. That is not so much the case today so far as regards the game of whist. Of all the great whist organizations in this country there is probably not one which countenances gambling in any way .-Boston Advertiser.

THE Easter services at the Christian church Sunday night were very entertaining and a large audience was on ville yesterday and Mrs. Sharrard went hand to enjoy them. The Easter story was well rendered in songs, recitations and readings. Misses Clara Mershon and Lillie Peyton each sang a solo very creditably, while a number of tots recited in a manner which elicited much complimentary mention. Jack Beazclusion of the program.

> THE announcement of George B. Cooper, familiarly known as "Thompsy," for county clerk appears in this issue. There are few men better qualified to fill the office than Mr. Cooper and the democrats seem to think he is the man for the office as no one else has been mentioned for it. During the two terms he held it before he made a good record and his friends, and they are legion, are mighty anxious to see him hold it again. His democracy is too well known to necessitate even a reference to it.

THE bridge carpenter's car was broken into at Rowland a few nights ago and a lot of saws, files, planes and other tools were stolen. Bridge Carpenter Newland ordered Constable Speed Peyton to search William Ashlinger's house, which he did, but found nothing. Ashlinger has now got his back up and says he is going to sue Newland for damages to his character. It will be remembered that Judge T. L. Shelton had Ashlinger arrested for stealing some barber supplies from him some time ago, but failed to convict him.

FIRSTNATION AL BANK

OF STANFORD, KY. Capital Stock $100,000. Surplus $15,750.

Attention of the public is called to the fact that this is the only National Bank in Stanford. Un-der the provisions of the National Bank Act depositors are secured not only by the capital stock, but by the stockholders' liability for an amount but by the stockholders' liability for an amount equal in the stock, so that depositors of this institution are secured by a fund of $200,000. Five sworn statements of the condition of the Bank are made each year to the United States Government and its assets are examined at stated times by government agents, thus securing additional and perfect safety to depositors.

This institution, originally established as the Deposit Bank of Stanford in 1858, then reorganized as the National Bank of Stanford in 1858, and again reorganized as the First National Bank of Stanford in 1852, has had practically an uninterrupted existence for 35 years. It is better supplied now with facilities for transacting business promptly and liberally than ever before in its long and honorable career. Accounts of Individuals, fiduciaries, firms and individuals solicited.
